

---

1913 5c origin

2 messages

---

William Barrett [REDACTED]
To: ericnumis@aol.com

Tue, Jul 19, 2011 at 10:59 PM

Dear Sir,

Ute Wartenburg has kindly provided your address.

Last year conversation with Bob van Ryzin turned to the creation of the 1913 nickel.

i would enquire as to whether your views on the subject have been published and if so whether they still hold?

Hoping for the favour of your reply, I remain

Yours sincerely

William Barrett

--
William Barrett
[REDACTED]
Box 9 Victoria Station
Montreal, Quebec, CANADA H3Z 2V4
TEL: 514-937-8075

---

EricNumis@aol.com <EricNumis@aol.com>
To: [REDACTED]

Wed, Jul 20, 2011 at 2:39 PM

Dear Mr. Barrett:

We are glad to try to respond to your inquiry about the US Liberty Head 1913 Nickels. These have received in the past an enormous amount of publicity and presume you are aware of it. It is a sensitive subject.. At present there is an article prepared for publication by someone else on the topic of the Type II 1913 Indian Head nickel struck in copper which was in the holder with the 1913 Liberty Head nickels, etc.. We still have the holder, the copper piece and the 1913 Indian Head normal Type I. It is preferable for us to consider trying to answer some of the details for you if you could inform us what you plan to do about the matter. We are completely non - commercial and try to help researchers.

Eric P. Newman Numismatic Education Society
by Eric P. Newman, pres.

[Quoted text hidden]